

Shop Boulder City?
Give Me a Break
October 25, 2010
Special to the BC Free

How many times have you been admonished by residents saying “You should always try to shop in Boulder City and not “go over the hill?”

Probably more than you like.

Well, it was with keen but subdued interest to see two prominent Boulder City residents shopping at Lowe’s Hardware Store on Boulder Highway in Henderson yesterday.

One would assume that many things found at the national big-box chain store could also be found at Ace Hardware or even Mayor Tobler’s True Value Hardware Store on Canyon Road, but apparently this couple wanted to put a few extra miles on their new family jalopy.

And yes, there they were, the man in a self-promoting t-shirt and the woman in shorts, a halter top and sunglasses – none other than City Manager Vicki Mayes and here husband, Denny.

It was hard to tell what they were buying or even looking for since the lengthy aisles are filled with a plethora of products including paints, pipes and plywood.

Perhaps the one thing they couldn’t find in Boulder City and thought there would be a better chance to locate in Henderson was a license plate frame saying “I Love Montana” or “I’d Rather Be Creating an LLC in Montana.”